While you are recovering it is important to focus on increasing the strengths, supports and resources you are connecting with. This is called building your recovery capital.

When you are feeling better consider progressing on to a Wellbeing Tracker. There are many different ones to choose from and they are available from our website.

Tips

1. If you feel your score is in between two of the options then place a mark between them and score it as a half point. For example, if you feel the choice that best describes your experience is in between "OK" and "Good" then put a mark between them and score it as "3.5".
2. If you feel more than one answer applies mark your score as their average. For example, if you feel some of your close relationships are best described as "OK" and some are best described as "difficult" then place your score on the average, in this case, "not so good".
3. If you are using the Recovery Tracker and you are doing well on most of the questions but there is one specific area that you are struggling in, it might be time to move on to Wellbeing Tracker that focuses on that area. For example, if you are doing well in most areas of your life but having difficulties at work then you may find it helpful to progress on to the Career Tracker. Another example would be if you are doing well generally but a specific relationship is difficult then it might be good progress on to the Relationship Tracker.
4. Another tip is that whatever way you use the Recovery Tracker, or any of the tools available from www.WellbeingTrackers.com, use it in a way that feels right to you - that's the key!

Instructions for Team Trackers

Step 1: Add up the team's total scores. Calculate the average by dividing this number by the number of members of the team.

Step 2: Plot the average on the chart and reflect on your progress as a recovery team. If the team feels it would be helpful you can also chart the highest and lowest scores as well as the average.

Step 3: Consult as a team and come up with ideas to improve the score on the chart by one point.
